

The last film I saw was the girl on the train. I went to see it with my dad and his friend and daughter. I brought a drink and popcorn there. I also read the book before I watched the film and I think the book was better because they missed good bits from the book that would have made it better. It is hard to explain what is it about however it is a very good film that I would see again. Its good because it is tense and keeps you on the edge of your seat. It is a 15 and I went to see it even though I am only 14.
