

I think that school children should be able to wear what they like on their feet. As long as it is still black, then it should be fine, even if they are trainers.

Because it is showing that you should be different to everyone else, instead of wearing the same as everyone. We and our own people should be able to show that to everyone. I find this fair. Because it shouldn't matter what we wear on our feet. As long as we work, it should be fine.
