

Meeting

A girl called Sarah, who's 15 years old has a hard life. Her best friend Alice moved away two weeks ago, now there are 1800 kilometers distance between them. They text each other every day but anyways it's hard for both of them. Alice was Sarah's only friend at school, now she's all on her own. Sarah was always asking Alice for advice when she didn't know what to do, so what is she supposed to do now? She already knows that there will never be a person she will trust as much as she trusted Alice. They can't phone each other because it would be too expensive, so it's even harder. Alice was asking her mother to drive to Sarah's place, but because of school there is no time to do so. Time went by and they didn't see each other for more than one and a half years. But this summer they finally are going to meet each other, Alice wants to surprise Sarah, that's why she didn't text her back for over a week. Of course she knows it's not ok to do so, and Sarah will be kind of mad, but it's worth surprising her. The day had come, Alice arrived at her best friend's house and knocked at the door. The girl opened the door, her eyes got big and she started crying. Alice shouted "Surprise!" They hugged each other and went up to her room. Alice was staying at Sarah's place for 3 days, that's enough time to refresh their friendship. But the days were very weird, Alice felt like she was staying at a stranger's house. Sarah had changed a lot, but so did Alice. After that time they never texted each other again, because Alice moved back to her hometown and they met each other everyday again. Their friendship had never ended and Sarah could talk about her secrets and problems to her best friend again. Why they moved back? Well, Alice's parents got divorced so she and her mother moved to her grandmother and her father stayed in their new flat. Now Alice is 1800 kilometers away from her dad. Actually, her feelings were mixed, she hadn't had such a good relationship to