

Instructions: Cut off the right white part (the answers) from the table below. Cut all the answers into paper strips. Read the questions and find the matching answers.

When were the Middle Ages?	A draw bridge.
What is a weapon with a short handle and a long sharp blade?	A drop gate.
What did a knight carry to protect his body?	A moat.
What did a knight wear to protect his body?	A nobleman.
What is a knight's movable part of the helmet in front of the eyes called?	A peasant.
What was a poor farmer without land called?	A shield.
What kind of special door did a medieval fortress have?	A sword.
What was the name of the water filled ditch which surrounded a medieval castle?	A visor.
What did people have to cross to get into a medieval fortress?	A well.
Where did people in a medieval fortress get their water from?	An armour.
Which disease was the Black Death ?	By fleas that were on rats. The fleas bit the humans.
How did the Black Death spread?	From the 5 th to the 15 th century.
What was a peasant's work?	The Plague.
What was a knight's work?	They owned land and rented it out to the peasants who had to work for him.
What was a landowner called?	To fight in tournaments and battles and to protect weaker people.
What did landowners do?	To work in the fields and to provide food for the nobleman and the knights.

When were the Middle Ages?	From the 5 th to the 15 th century.
What is a weapon with a short handle and a long sharp blade?	A sword.
What did a knight carry to protect his body?	A shield.
What did a knight wear to protect his body?	An armour.
What is a knight's movable part of the helmet in front of the eyes called?	A visor.
What was a poor farmer without land called?	A peasant.
What kind of special door did a medieval fortress have?	A drop gate.
What was the name of the water filled ditch which surrounded a medieval castle?	A moat.
What did people have to cross to get into a medieval fortress?	A draw bridge.
Where did people in a medieval fortress get their water from?	A well.
Which disease was the Black Death ?	The Plague.
How did the Black Death spread?	By fleas that were on rats. The fleas bit the humans.
What was a peasant's work?	To work in the fields and to provide food for the nobleman and the knights.
What was a knight's work?	To fight in tournaments and battles and to protect weaker people.
What was a landowner called?	A nobleman.
What did landowners do?	They owned land and rented it out to the peasants who had to work for him.